Afternoon,

I would like to note my objection to a specific aspect of the proposed local plan, notably the development of the 'Thelwall Heys' site.

The stated aim of the plan reads: 'This should include policies to deliver...protection and enhancement of the natural and historic environment, including landscape, wildlife'

How can building on a site beyond the current built up areas of Thewall, nestling between the Trans-Pennine trail and the Bridgewater canal claim to fulfil this planning objective? This is simply urban creep into the Green Belt, building beyond existing housing. To my mind this would be an act of environmental vandalism, destroying a beautiful part of the natural and historic environment impacting both landscape and wildlife. I attach a recent photo to illustrate the beauty of the area which would be tragic to lose.

Many Thanks

Jonathan Bramwell
