I have studied the proposals for development in warrington and quite frankly I am dismayed. There is no justification for the proposed growth and to do so by grabbing green belt land goes against every concern that the council should have for the environment. To build on green belt is just unthinkable when we should be conserving our countryside for future generations. Warrington will just merge into Appleton Thorn and Grappenhall and traffic will grind to a stand still. I work in the town centre and my commute to work can take 45 minutes on a bad day. I would like to be able to use public transport but cannot as buses come so infrequently. The council needs a long hard think about its strategy- there are plenty of disused sites in the town centre which should be developed in preference or returned to parkland
